

"COMPASSIONATE COMMUNICATION: WHAT'S THAT?!"

FREE In-Person Workshop for Early Childhood Educators

Developing communication skills that nurture human connection and bring about peaceful resolution

Compassionate Communication stems from the work of The Center for Nonviolent Communication (CNVC), founded by Marshall Rosenberg, Ph.D. This human-centered approach to communication offers a way to expand our awareness and understanding of the underlying feelings and unmet needs that drive our conflicts; leading to more trust and safety, greater empathy, respect and cooperation, fewer conflicts and more engaged learning.

SATURDAY, APRIL 15

9:00am to 1:00pm

Light Lunch Provided

LOCATION:

Santa Fe School for the Arts & Sciences
Indoor and Outdoor Campus
5912 Jaguar Drive, Santa Fe, 87507

What to expect:

- Unpacking the Compassionate Communication model and how to apply it
- Hands-on activities designed to uncover a deeper understanding of this model
- Building a network of support with early childhood community members
 - 4.0 Early Childhood Training hours
- Spanish interpretation available if needed

Space is limited. Register online HERE today!

Email colab@santafeschool.org with any questions

COLLABORATIVE LEARNING for teachers, by teachers community-led, equity centered and driven by collective wisdom with support from:

LANL
FOUNDATION
*Investing in Learning
& Human Potential*